Corporate governance

TerraHash Energy LLC is a California limited liability company headquartered in Los Angeles. The company maintains a management structure led by Natalie Hayes, Chief Executive Officer and Executive Director. Executive management coordinates U.S. business strategy, organizational leadership, infrastructure development priorities, operating execution, and corporate accountability.

The Hong Kong shareholder has invested capital in TerraHash Energy LLC. The U.S. company conducts its business through its California legal entity, and executive management directs its day-to-day operations in the United States.

The company organizes its work around clear executive responsibility, documented decisions, responsible financial stewardship, fair employment practices, and disciplined development of energy infrastructure opportunities. These principles guide how teams communicate, manage resources, and conduct relationships with employees, partners and other stakeholders.

Corporate governance supports practical execution: business plans are assigned to responsible leaders, material commitments are reviewed through established management channels, and operational performance is evaluated against the company's priorities.

Management and governance responsibilities

Natalie Hayes directs U.S. executive management and business operations, supported by Human Resources, People Operations, and Financial Research & Digital Asset Market Analysis functions. The company also presents a Board of Directors and committee leadership on its Leadership page. Executive management carries out the company's U.S. business priorities, while the published board and committee roles contribute corporate governance and oversight expertise.

Company leadership coordinates planning and execution across energy infrastructure development, operating activities, commercial relationships, talent management and research. The internal allocation of duties enables management to address business opportunities with a consistent approach to accountability, records and risk.

The public Leadership page identifies the people associated with executive, functional and board responsibilities. Corporate decisions, professional standards, and communications are coordinated within the applicable company structure.

Governance document directory

The TerraHash Energy governance document series addresses eight defined areas of organizational practice:

No.	Document	Subject
01	Governance & Leadership Responsibilities	Governance, leadership functions, accountability
02	Financial Oversight & Internal Controls	Budgeting, controls, financial review
03	Executive Compensation & Incentive Governance	Compensation and incentive administration
04	Leadership Selection & Succession	Leadership recruitment and continuity
05	Leadership Standards & Fair Opportunity	Professional conduct and equal opportunity
06	Member, Investor & Stakeholder Communications	Corporate communication standards
07	Corporate Appointments & Authority Procedures	Appointments and delegated authority
08	Corporate Identity & Governing Documents	California entity and governance records

Together, the eight governance documents provide an organized reference across leadership, finance, compensation, appointments, fair opportunity, stakeholder communication and corporate identity. Each document addresses a distinct administrative or governance function; the series is organized so responsibilities can be located and understood without duplicating the company's broader business presentation.

This directory complements the company's corporate information pages. The documents may be read alongside the public Leadership, Corporate Identity, and Corporate Performance information to understand the enterprise's business framework and governance priorities.

Public company information

The company publishes corporate identity, leadership, international business history, executive career opportunities, and governance information through its official website. This overview explains the scope of the governance series and the company's approach to accountable management.

Governance Principles in Practice

TerraHash Energy applies governance as a practical management discipline. Responsibilities are assigned to named functions, operating activity is supported by clear records, and material decisions are expected to align with the company's business priorities and professional standards.

The company's governance approach supports a disciplined operating environment in which executive management, functional teams and published board leadership each contribute to accountability. This approach helps maintain consistency in communication, responsible handling of company resources, and continuity in corporate administration.

How the Document Series Supports the Company

- Provides a structured reference for leadership responsibilities, internal administration, compensation principles, appointments, communications and corporate identity.
- Supports consistent communication of the company's management framework to employees, counterparties, candidates and other stakeholders.
- Works alongside the company's website materials so public corporate information and internal governance themes are presented in a coherent way.
- Reinforces the company's commitment to responsible conduct, clear accountability and documented business administration.

Corporate Administration and Records

Corporate information is maintained through the company's official records, public website and designated business contacts. Governance documents are intended to reinforce how the company organizes leadership, accountability and communication across its U.S. operations and related corporate information.
