Our executive compensation approach

TerraHash Energy LLC provides company-approved executive compensation for U.S. leadership responsibilities across its energy and infrastructure business. The company's compensation approach recognizes executive accountability, relevant professional experience, the complexity of assigned responsibilities and long-term contributions to enterprise development.

The company provides position-specific compensation information through its executive recruiting process and publishes salary ranges in job postings where required by applicable law. The individual employment offer states the employee's base salary and any additional approved compensation components.

Compensation includes an approved base-salary framework and the employment terms applicable to each individual. Where included in a compensation arrangement, performance incentives and long-term participation are addressed as specific components rather than implied entitlements for every employee.

The company communicates compensation in the recruitment and employment process in a direct and consistent manner. Position-specific pay information is provided through relevant job advertisements and HR communications, and individual agreed terms are documented through the company's employment process.

Employee benefits

TerraHash Energy LLC has confirmed an employee benefits program that includes medical, dental, and vision coverage and 401(k) retirement benefits. These benefits form part of the company's U.S. compensation and talent-retention approach.

Benefit	Company offering
Medical insurance	Company-sponsored medical coverage for eligible employees
Dental insurance	Dental coverage for eligible employees
Vision insurance	Vision coverage for eligible employees
401(k) retirement	401(k) retirement savings benefits for eligible employees
Paid time off	Paid leave and company holidays under company policy and applicable employment terms
Executive incentives	Role-specific performance or long-term incentives when included in the approved executive package

Health and retirement benefits are part of the company's U.S. employment offering. Medical coverage supports employees' access to healthcare; dental and vision coverage complement that protection. The 401(k) retirement benefit gives eligible employees a workplace retirement savings arrangement and supports long-term financial planning.

Paid leave and company-recognized holidays contribute to a sustainable professional work environment. The company's aim is a competitive U.S. executive employment package that combines clearly established compensation with meaningful employee benefits.

Benefit administration

Benefits are administered under the applicable insurance coverage, enrollment information, retirement plan, and company employment policies. The relevant plan materials provide the details of employee eligibility, coverage, effective dates, retirement contributions, and any employer matching arrangements.

Human Resources coordinates benefits communication and employee onboarding information. Employees receive the relevant enrollment instructions and plan materials describing covered services, participation requirements and the operation of the retirement program.

Employer contributions to a 401(k), if provided under the plan, are determined by the retirement plan itself; this overview makes no claim regarding a specific matching percentage. The company describes coverage and retirement terms accurately without suggesting identical plan options for all employment categories.

Executive recruiting and offer process

The hiring team discusses the position's responsibilities, location, compensation package, benefits, and expected performance outcomes with qualified candidates. Final individual compensation and applicable benefit participation are documented in the employment offer and plan enrollment materials.

Recruiting contact: hr@terrahashenergy.com

The company approaches executive employment as a long-term professional relationship. HR coordinates candidate communications and compensation discussions, and the hiring process presents the responsibilities, reporting expectations, work arrangements and benefits associated with the position.

This corporate overview is a public explanation of the company's employment approach. Employees use their individual employment materials and benefits information to understand and administer their specific compensation and coverage.

Compensation Philosophy

TerraHash Energy approaches executive compensation as part of a broader professional relationship built on responsibility, performance and long-term business contribution.

Compensation is intended to reflect the importance of leadership roles in supporting the company's development, operational quality and organizational continuity.

The company's compensation framework emphasizes clarity, professionalism and consistency. Pay decisions are communicated directly, documented appropriately and aligned with the responsibilities of the role and the company's approved employment approach.

Benefits and Employee Well-Being

Medical, dental, vision and retirement benefits are important parts of the company's employment offering. Together with paid leave and company-recognized holidays, these benefits support employee well-being and reinforce TerraHash Energy's effort to provide a stable and competitive professional environment.

Professional Environment and Support

- Benefits information is communicated through Human Resources and relevant onboarding or enrollment materials.
- Employees receive the materials needed to understand coverage, participation, timing and administrative procedures.
- The company values direct communication regarding employment terms so that compensation and benefits are understood in a professional and transparent manner.
- The overall compensation and benefits structure supports recruitment, retention and the development of long-term working relationships.
