CORPORATE GOVERNANCE / 04 OF 08

Leadership Selection, Appointment & Succession Policy

Qualified leadership and continuity in critical business functions

LEGAL ENTITY	TerraHash Energy LLC | California, United States

TerraHash Energy LLC values leadership capability, sound judgment, and continuity of execution. This policy governs the practical standards used to assess leadership candidates and manage appointments and transitions.

01 Role definition and selection criteria

1.1 Leadership roles are defined by business needs and documented responsibilities. A role description identifies the function, reporting relationship, location or work arrangement, expected results, decision authority, and relevant professional requirements.

1.2 Selection decisions are based on job-related competence, operational and financial judgment, relevant technical experience, ethical conduct, leadership record, and the ability to deliver the Company's priorities.

1.3 Experience associated with another company, affiliate, or historical business may be considered as relevant professional background but is not represented as an achievement of TerraHash Energy LLC.

02 Assessment and diligence

2.1 Candidates are evaluated through a consistent process appropriate to the role, which may include structured discussions, work-history review, professional references, and verification of material qualifications as permitted by law.

2.2 The depth of evaluation corresponds to the responsibilities of the role. Positions with substantial access to funds, sensitive systems, critical infrastructure, material contracts, or regulated activities warrant proportionate diligence and controls.

2.3 Decision-makers identify actual or potential conflicts of interest, including relevant personal or business relationships, and manage them through the appropriate authorization process.

03 Appointments and corporate authority

3.1 An appointment becomes effective under the applicable executed documents, Company action, and legal requirements. A job offer, announcement, biography, or title alone does not confer authority to execute contracts, control funds, or bind the Company.

3.2 Employment and service arrangements set out compensation, scope of work, confidentiality, intellectual-property terms, termination rights, and other relevant provisions. Separate written delegation governs powers that are not inherent in the role.

3.3 The Company communicates reporting lines and approval limits clearly during onboarding. Official public biographies and leadership descriptions are based on documented appointments and accurate professional information.

04 Succession and continuity

4.1 Management maintains practical continuity arrangements for essential functions such as financial authorization, project delivery, infrastructure operations, information systems, customer relationships, and legal compliance.

4.2 Leadership development emphasizes accountability, cross-functional coordination, knowledge transfer, and the ability to manage both operating opportunities and material business risks.

4.3 When a leadership transition occurs, the Company updates role records, reporting structures, system access, banking permissions, approved public information, and relevant contractual arrangements.

05 Fairness, confidentiality, and review

5.1 Recruitment and advancement decisions are conducted in accordance with applicable equal employment opportunity requirements. Candidate information is collected, retained, accessed, and disclosed for legitimate business purposes and in accordance with applicable privacy rules.

5.2 Personnel evaluations and succession discussions are handled confidentially, with access restricted to individuals who have a valid need to know.

5.3 This policy guides management selection and transition processes without displacing the appointment powers established by the Company's legal governing instruments.

TERRAHASH ENERGY LLC