CORPORATE GOVERNANCE / 06 OF 08

Member, Investor & Stakeholder Communications Policy

Accurate information and consistent external communications

LEGAL ENTITY	TerraHash Energy LLC | California, United States

Reliable corporate communication requires clear legal-entity identification, careful review of factual claims, and appropriate handling of confidential information. This policy sets standards for communications with members, investors, business partners, and the public.

01 Audiences and legal distinctions

1.1 For TerraHash Energy LLC, a "member" is a person or legal entity holding a membership interest under the Company's governing records. A lender, prospective investor, adviser, business partner, or website visitor does not acquire member rights merely through a business relationship or receipt of information.

1.2 The Company distinguishes membership interests from corporate shares and does not imply that the California LLC is a publicly listed issuer or that it is subject to a foreign stock exchange's rules without a separately substantiated basis.

1.3 Communications identify the relevant legal entity where that distinction matters, including when discussing affiliated international businesses and their respective records.

02 Accuracy and substantiation

2.1 External statements concerning company status, management, ownership, projects, customer relationships, financing, revenue, assets, licenses, energy capacity, and digital-asset activities are supported by appropriate records.

2.2 The Company distinguishes existing operations and executed arrangements from objectives, forecasts, exploratory discussions, or plans. Aspirational statements are not presented as completed accomplishments.

2.3 Information prepared for prospective investors is accurate, appropriately qualified, and reviewed under the applicable legal, confidentiality, and securities requirements.

03 Member information and formal communications

3.1 Formal notices, member consents, information rights, governance decisions, and access to Company records follow the Operating Agreement and applicable law.

3.2 Requests for sensitive financial, ownership, strategic, or personnel information are assessed against the requester's contractual or statutory rights and the Company's confidentiality obligations.

3.3 The Company maintains records of significant notices and approvals and uses designated business channels to reduce confusion over instructions and official communications.

04 Website, media, and investor materials

4.1 Public-facing materials use consistent company names, titles, business descriptions, and appropriate entity attribution. Corporate history associated with an affiliate or predecessor is not presented as the operating record of the California LLC.

4.2 Financial presentations and project summaries use clear terminology and do not promise returns, financing availability, commercial performance, project completion, or liquidity absent adequate supporting documentation.

4.3 Public corrections or updates are made when material information is discovered to be inaccurate, outdated, or likely to mislead a reasonable reader.

05 Authorized responses and confidentiality

5.1 Material public statements and responses concerning sensitive corporate matters are coordinated through an appropriately authorized representative.

5.2 The Company protects personal information, trade secrets, contractual confidentiality, privileged material, and nonpublic financial information. Disclosure to advisers, lenders, counterparties, or investors follows applicable safeguards.

5.3 This communications policy does not expand the information rights of any recipient or replace a controlling confidentiality agreement, investor agreement, or legal duty.

TERRAHASH ENERGY LLC