Financial Oversight & Internal Controls Policy

Reliable records, disciplined approvals, and protection of company assets

LEGAL ENTITY	TerraHash Energy LLC | California, United States

Financial discipline is a central element of responsible infrastructure and energy operations. This policy describes the controls applicable to budgeting, payments, financial records, transaction review, and business risk.

01 Financial stewardship

1.1 The Company maintains financial records that reasonably reflect its transactions, obligations, balances, and operating activities. Transactions are supported by appropriate documentation and recorded on a consistent basis using accounting practices suitable for the Company's circumstances and applicable requirements.

1.2 Management provides authorized decision-makers with financial information sufficient to assess liquidity, expenditure, contractual commitments, material risks, and performance against approved business priorities.

1.3 Internal financial records, management-prepared financial information, externally reviewed statements, and audited financial statements are distinct categories. The Company does not describe financial information as audited or independently verified unless that work has actually been performed.

02 Budgets and commitments

2.1 Budgets identify the financial resources required for ongoing operations, personnel, projects, development activities, technology, and other material needs. Proposed expenses are evaluated for business purpose, available funding, expected benefit, and associated risk.

2.2 Material expenditures and commitments are approved by the persons holding the applicable authority. A budget allocation does not authorize an individual to exceed contractual, procurement, or signature limits established by the Company.

2.3 The Company maintains supporting records for significant purchasing, vendor selection, contracting, invoice approval, and changes to agreed scope or price. Related-party dealings and exceptional transactions receive appropriate conflict review.

03 Payments, banking, and reconciliations

3.1 Authority to initiate, approve, and release payments is assigned according to role and risk. Practical separation of duties is maintained wherever possible, supported by secondary review when staffing or systems require an alternative arrangement.

3.2 Changes to supplier payment instructions are verified through an independent channel. Bank-account access, signing privileges, and system permissions are reviewed following changes in personnel or responsibilities.

3.3 Cash balances and significant accounts are reconciled against supporting statements or records at intervals appropriate to transaction volume and risk. Unexplained differences are investigated and corrected without delay.

04 Digital assets and technology-related controls

4.1 For any business activity involving digital assets, custody, mining proceeds, settlement, or digital-asset counterparties, the Company applies controls proportionate to the activity and the assets at risk. Applicable controls address transaction authorization, wallet or account access, custody arrangements, reconciliation, cybersecurity, incident handling, and record retention.

4.2 Claims concerning digital-asset ownership, mining production, asset reserves, wallet balances, project economics, or investment returns are supported by reliable records before external publication.

4.3 The Company does not use projected cash flow, indicative financing, nonbinding customer discussions, or proposed infrastructure capacity as a substitute for recorded revenue or confirmed assets.

05 Risk review and information integrity

5.1 Financial risks are considered alongside operational, counterparty, security, regulatory, and contractual exposures. Material exceptions, suspected irregularities, or misuse of assets are promptly escalated to an authorized person independent of the transaction where practical.

5.2 Professional accounting, tax, legal, or other advisers may be engaged for matters requiring specialized judgment. The engagement and scope of any independent audit or review are separately documented.

5.3 Financial information used in business presentations, employment discussions, financing conversations, or public communications is presented accurately and with relevant limitations explained in the underlying materials.
