Corporate Appointments & Delegation of Authority Procedures

Documented authority from appointment through transition

LEGAL ENTITY	TerraHash Energy LLC | California, United States

These procedures define the administrative steps for recording and communicating leadership responsibilities, corporate signing powers, and changes to authorized representatives.

01 Authority hierarchy

1.1 Authority begins with the Company's valid legal governing instruments and applicable law. Internal policies, job descriptions, and managerial instructions operate within that hierarchy.

1.2 The person or body empowered to approve a particular appointment or delegation is determined by the Operating Agreement, valid Company action, and the scope of any pre-existing written delegation.

1.3 No appointment or delegation can convey rights or powers greater than those held by the person granting it.

02 Appointment administration

2.1 Before a role is announced, the Company identifies its business purpose, title, reporting relationship, responsibilities, and whether it is a management, employment, consulting, advisory, or other engagement.

2.2 Formal appointment documentation identifies the legal entity, the individual or service provider, the role, its commencement terms, and the authority or agreement under which the appointment is made.

2.3 Employment terms, compensation, equity-related arrangements, confidentiality, intellectual property, and any restrictive obligations are addressed through the appropriate written agreements.

03 Delegation of authority

3.1 A delegation specifies the business activities covered, any budget or transaction limitations, reserved decisions, approval conditions, and reporting requirements. High-impact matters receive an appropriate level of supervision and independent review.

3.2 Authority to enter contracts, operate bank accounts, approve capital expenditure, transfer assets, issue binding commitments, or communicate on legal matters is not inferred solely from a senior title.

3.3 A delegated person acts within the defined authority and may not sub-delegate powers unless the governing written instrument or applicable authority expressly permits it.

04 Corporate records and third-party reliance

4.1 The Company maintains orderly appointment and authority records, including controlling written decisions, executed agreements, current role lists, authorized-signatory instructions, and superseding instruments.

4.2 Representations made to banks, vendors, customers, government bodies, and other third parties are consistent with current corporate records. Evidence of authority is provided only by designated representatives.

4.3 Public biographies and company directories identify a person's role accurately but are not substitutes for the instruments establishing agency or signatory powers.

05 Changes, revocations, and departures

5.1 A change in employment, assignment, appointment, or governance capacity triggers review of the person's delegated powers and access rights.

5.2 Revocation or amendment of authority is documented and communicated to affected internal systems and third parties where appropriate. Company property, confidential information, and access credentials are handled securely during transitions.

5.3 The procedures apply consistently to U.S. Company appointments; appointments involving distinct affiliated entities are documented by those entities under their own governing authority.
